Headline:
Windy with rain at times, colder evening.

Today:
Mainly cloudy with some showery rain, and the odd bright or sunny interval. A short spell of heavy rain will cross Argyll this afternoon reaching the Central Belt by early evening, with the north brightening up though turning colder. Windy. Maximum temperature 9 deg C (48 deg F).

Tonight:
Rain clearing southern areas this evening. Then a good deal of dry and clear weather, though some wintry showers will spread to Argyll and the Ayrshire Coast. Minimum temperature -1 deg C (30 deg F).

Friday:
A bright day with some sunny spells. A few mainly light hail or snow showers developing by the afternoon, dying out in evening with a frost setting in again. Maximum temperature 7 deg C (45 deg F).

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Cold on Saturday and Sunday with sunny spells and just the odd light wintry shower. Sharp night frosts. Less cold on Monday with some rain showers.
